GIRL'S WONDROUS START AT NEW SCHOOL

Safa Brown, of Manchester, has made an unprecedented start to the school year. The 11-year-old has broken all previously held records of excellency, during her first week of transition from primary to secondary school.

The socks have been knocked quite swiftly off the headmaster's feet, who cannot believe the 'speed at which this young girl has gained much sought-after positions within the school system.' He was referring, of course, to Safa being given the honorary title of Head of All Things in the School, Ever.

However, speaking after a netball game win at the school,

Safa admitted, "It's been wonderful, but the excitement hasn't ALL been academic." Hesitantly adding, "I found a baby dragon in the changing rooms."

Safa has been secretly caring for the mystical creature, shipping him unsuspectingly from school to home. She has braced herself for the unveiling of this discovery upon release of today's paper, saying that she is most afraid of what her little brother Mikael might do when he finds out he's been living with a fire-breathing dragon, that will soon grow to the size of his room.
